

One Day in Hong Kong

(This article has been published in the English Street.)

4A    Lau Kin Kui, Ken

SUNRISE, is a symbol of a new day.
Some people refresh themselves for the coming holiday.
Others from all walks of life
Perform their duties.

Sunlight fades from the west.
Oh! It's the time to take a rest.
Neon lights begin to glare,
The day reaches its climax!

When darkness falls,
A day's hard work is over.
No more worries,
No more miseries.
Busy shopkeepers and hawkers,
Carry on their business like workers.
Tsim Sha Tsui and Mong Kok never sleep,
People in the city never weep.

In this wonderful place,
There is little space,
But a lot of happy face.

In this city,
Every minute, every person is busy,
But time isn't lazy.

When the bright sun rises again,
Everything will return to its original form.