

Warning!

(This poem has been published in the South China Morning Post.)

5B So Kit Wai, Kid

The sky is darkening
Animals are dying
Trees are blasting
And the temperature is rising

No more fresh air
But black and dirty exhausted gases

No more beautiful flowers
But huge and grey chimneys

No more clear water
But industrial waste and sewage

No more animals
But the dry and bare flatland

No more humans
They die of suffocation, hunger and thirst

Who should be blamed?
Who should take the responsibility?
