Everyone should have friends; otherwise life would be boring and we would all be lonely. Friends are those who play, study, have lunch, go to school and laugh together with you.

A greeting from a friend can make me feel happy for the whole day. A funny conversation can put a smile on my face until evening. Without friends, how could I live happily?

Besides, close friends should know you well and you should understand them, too. You feel relieved after telling them your thoughts, whether happy or sad, as well as your regrets. Your friends will accept your shortcomings, too.

There are some secrets only you and your closest friend or friends will know. Your friends will support and encourage you. They will also make suggestions about what you should do. Most important, friends will lead you back to the road when you are lost. When you meet friends like this, please treasure them because they don't often come along.
